Dame Helen Mirren has added yet another award to the many she has already won for The Queen. She was named Best actress at this years Baftas, beating fellow Brits Dame Judi Dench and Kate Winslet. The star-studded ceremony included the likes of Forest Whitaker (Best Actor for The Last King of Scotland), Jake Gyllenhaal, Penelope Cruz and Sienna Miller. Stephen Fry's quick, clever wit was sorely missed, but Jonathan Ross wasn't a bad replacement even if most of his 'jokes' fell flat. One of his better quips saw him thank the US contingent for attending. Even if they were there, he said, "partly for these awards, but mainly to escape Victoria Beckham." Simon Pegg and Ricky Gervais easily drew louder laughs from the audience. Maybe Wossy should sack his scriptwriter.

Description / Added value:

- Red Carpet arrival to the Royal Opera House / Cocktail reception
- Seating for the awards ceremony (platinum seating will be in camera view)
- Guests then make there way to the Grosvenor Hotel for the official dinner
- A private after party takes place after the dinner
