Andy Roddick claims his fourth Artois Championship in 2007

The Stella Artois Championships, held at The Queen's Club in the heart of prestigious West Kensington, produces a unique blend of fascinating grass court tennis combined with a smart, exclusive atmosphere. The players at this tournament are certainly playing to win – their next stop is Wimbledon....

In 2007 Andy Roddick saved a match point against Frenchman Nicolas Mahut in a dramatic final before going on to claim his fourth Artois Championship title in the past five years. Roddick's 4-6, 7-6 (7), 7-6 (2) victory in 2 hours 17 minutes means he joins John McEnroe, Boris Becker and Lleyton Hewitt with four titles at the Queens Club – one more than his coach Jimmy Connors.
